If that redress should be refused when so asked, then it suggests the call of a Southern Convention, to consider of the grievances of the South, and of the mode and measures of redress. The plan of action of either Convention to be laid before the people, for their adoption or rejection, and of course, to be without effect until ratified. Nothing was recommended. but reason and argument, unless oppression should reach a point, which the people should think intolerable; when, according to both parties, in this State, the States may provide for their own safety. The point at which the oppression should be deemed intolerable, was the great matter of difference between them.

The people have decided against the first step which was proposed—a Convention of the State. There all action ceases-it is an end of the matter. The peculiar institution of the South requires repose for its security. I acquiesce in the decision, and hope the country will be restored to quiet and harmony. But these matters have no connection with the lection, they are still made to mingle in the canvass. their features true to life.

My pretensions are founded, alone, upon my qualifications for the station. I refer to my service in the office for the past nine years as the evidence of those qualifications, and I invite the strictest scrutiny into my Judicial conduct. By that I am more than willing to stand or fall. In times past, you have made the judicial elections rise far above party considerations—is there any reason for a departure from this honored principle on the present occasion.

I am still a candidate before you for a seat on the bench of the High Court, and shall remain so until the election. Should you again honor me with your confidence by a renewal of the trust, I will repay you, to the best of my ability, by a faithful discharge of my duty.

With profound gratitude for your past kindness, I remain, -Your ob't serv't, ALEX. M. CLAYTON. Holly Springs, Sept. 25th, 1851.
